ANXIOUS TIMES

We live in anxious times. Many are anxious about viruses and variants, climate change and ageing in a rapidly changing world. Sharing our anxieties with loved ones in family or among trusted friends can help us to cope. But with the changing circumstances of mobile relationships, who can we depend on to throw us a lifeline when the chips are down? Jesus lived in anxious times too. The local people of His time had barely enough food to live on. They were oppressed by a harsh foreign army of Roman soldiers preparing to destroy Jerusalem with its beautiful Temple, the focus and symbol of the people's hopes in their God. As well as sharing these anxieties, Jesus foresaw His own impending suffering and crucifixion, engineered by the local religious leaders and facilitated by the Roman forces of occupation. All these hope-sapping forebodings are intertwined in the words of Jesus in the complex tapestry of this Sunday's Gospel.

What sustained Jesus through it all? The Father's love was His sustaining lifeline. His constant awareness of this loving presence, frequently accessed through deep reflective prayer and intimate chat nurtured His fidelity to the task He had been sent to do. This lifelong task was to spread the Good News of God's merciful friendship and His ongoing loving care of His people. This love was witnessed by Jesus' caring for the sick, by His welcome for the sinners, by His welcoming response to the 'outsider', by His patience with the ambitious disciples, by His counter cultural respect for women, by His calling out injustice. Always His life line was His Father's love.

The antidote to anxiety is practical love in action through constructive sensitive kindness to each other. Responding to the daily prompting of the Lord and to the providential circumstances of life around us each day is the road to peace of mind and to building the Kingdom of God together. Chat intimately to the Father as Jesus did. Seize the day!
